

Services Overview

Have you had any of these experiences?

- Project and resource managers often fight over resources
- Priorities of projects frequently change, with resources reassigned
- Senior managers have authority to unilaterally approve and release projects
- Projects are frequently late and/or over budget and/or do not deliver the full scope promised
- There always seems to be way more work than resources available
- Even if the strategic idea is implemented, the company sometimes does not achieve the expected improvement
- Scope increases, but the schedule slips because no additional resources are provided
- There is a significant turnover at the senior management level, right up through the president
- Strategic plan is presented as a list of initiatives. The cause-effect logic tying those initiatives to the goals of the organization is absent
- The list of initiatives is not prioritized. Therefore, it is assumed that all ideas should be implemented simultaneously

If you answered “yes” to several of these questions, Thinktank Consulting can help you with your challenges.
